

Special Interest Volunteers FAQ

A resource for Girl Scout leaders and service unit team members

What is a special interest volunteer?

A special interest volunteer wants to share their talents, interests and time with girls on a flexible, as needed schedule.

Why have special interest volunteers?

This volunteer opportunity exposes more adults to the benefits of Girl Scouting thereby increasing our community partners and support. Special Interest Volunteers are a great resource for staff and volunteers – allowing you to offer programming outside of your skill set or get an extra hand for events and projects. Leaders don't have to do it all and girls benefit from interacting with other positive adult role models.

How can I use special interest volunteers?

You can use a special interest volunteer to assist at an event, lead an activity with a specific skill, mentor girls for the Girl Scout Gold, Silver, or Bronze Award project as well as assist on a field or camping trip. Browse the list of skills offered by our special interest volunteers to get program and project ideas to bring back to the girls. Let the girls pick what interests them.

How can I find out what talents and skills River Valleys' special interest volunteers offer?

River Valleys' Special Interest Volunteer Database can be found on the River Valleys' website under the Service Unit Team Resources section.

What do I do if I find someone I'd like to contact?

To protect the privacy of our volunteers, only first names and last initials are included in the website version of the special interest volunteer database. If you would like to contact one or more special interest volunteers, contact River Valleys and request special interest volunteer contact information. You may choose to obtain contact information on one person or request that the whole internal special interest volunteer database (which includes contact information) be e-mailed to you. Contact # 800-845-0787.

Please note when contacting a special interest volunteer some people do not check their e-mail regularly so a phone call or an e-mail followed by a phone call may be more effective. Provide the individual with as many details as you have so they can make a decision as to whether or not the opportunity will work for them.

Working with special interest volunteers: When a special interest volunteer agrees to assist you with an event or project please keep in mind that you may be their first experience with Girl Scouting.

- Provide the specific details and information they will need to best assist you with your request.
- Make them feel welcome. Remember to greet them and give them instructions. Introduce them to other adult volunteers involved.
- Thank the special interest volunteer for their time and energy. Addresses are not included on the special interest list to protect the individual's privacy. If you anticipate wanting to send a thank-you card please ask the volunteer for their address or arrange with the volunteer development manager to have the note forwarded.
- Special interest volunteers undergo the volunteer application process and are interviewed by phone; however, the skills listed are "self-identified." (For example if someone lists lifeguard, River Valleys does not verify certification) Discuss your activity with the volunteer and decide, based on your conversation, if they are the right individual to meet your specific need.
- Special interest volunteers are asked to reply back to all requests even if they are not available or interested in an opportunity, however, be aware that this does not always happen.
- If you have a concern with a special interest volunteer, please call or e-mail the volunteer development manager.
